The Wheat Crop.

What seedling is about ended in the prairie provinces. The weather, rather than the inclination of the farmers, or the amount of land in condition, has determined the acreage. It is estimated that in Manitoba the acreage is three-quarters that of last year. Saskatchewan, eight million acres, and in Alberta, ninety million acres. With all its variability, the weather in Alberta has interfered less with spring operations than that in the other two provinces. As the total seeded area is about eighteen million acres, the sowing is by no means one to breed disengagement. At an average of twenty bushels to the acre that would produce 360,000,000 bushels.

Montreal's Typhoid Season.

If the season has been backward in Alberta, it will be more backward, actually and relatively, in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. It is stated upon good authority that a greater percentage of the crop has been sown in Alberta than in either of the other two provinces. Now, however, the situation is reversed. Save in certain sections of Southern Alberta, where the Chinook winds upsets all rules, the higher altitude makes the sowing later in this province than it is on the plains. The set-back this year is considerable, and the sowing is still late. It is early yet to say what effect the late sowing will probably have on the harvest, but one result may be that the Manitoba and Saskatchewan crops will ripen no earlier than those in Alberta.

Montreal's Typhoid Epidemic.

Montreal reports 1389 cases of typhoid fever since May 1st, when the city officials declared that the epidemic had been got under control. It has been raging since early in March, and the total of cases reported is 3849, with 288 deaths.

Perhaps, after all, there was something more than a desire to protect the dairy interests of the New England states in the taking of such a stand, but the importation of Canadian milk, Montreal's milk supply may have no relation to the typhoid epidemic, but there is no cause to wonder if U.S. cities do not want a milk supply drawn from a district where that disease is rampant, and where public authorities declare that they have the epidemic in hand when they haven't.

The Manufacturers Gather.

Manufacturers from all parts of Canada are headed toward Calgary, where they meet in the annual meeting of the Canadian Association on Thursday. Next to being held in Edmonton, this important gathering could be held at no other center where it would so much interest the people of Alberta. After three days with varied sessions, necessary to manufacturing enterprise, this province is destined to be the greatest industrial province in the West, and any occasion which brings together in Alberta those who are engaged in manufacturing is an event of importance to all residents of the province. In entertaining the visitors in a fitting way, which the southern city will do, Calgary will be doing a service for all Alberta and will help to bring the claims of the province to attention in most desirable quarters.

There Are Others.

Dr. Magill reminds us that Canada only produces about one-tenth of the wheat that is grown in the world, and that the Canadian wheat which we do not need depends upon keeping the price within reach of the pocket books of people in Europe whose earning powers are on a level far below that to which Canadians are accustomed. There are others which do not have to be concerned necessarily. The westerner is under constant temptation to think that the world depends for its bread upon the thousand miles of wheat fields which stretch from Edmonton to Winnipeg. It does not. But in Western Canada did not send a bushel of wheat overseas. If we are to sell them, we must sell against home-grown wheat and wheat imported from India and the Argentine and Australia. This is also true of the grain of which bread is not made. Canada has not "eaten" on the world's bread supply, has no right to have, and never can have.

Approaching a Climax?

The Chinese seem to be simplifying their domestic embroilment, and getting lined up to settle the question of how and by whom they are to be governed. Reports from Shanghai are that General Shieh has made peace with the rival juntas at Hankow, which probably means that he is to be the chief power in the Manchurian reds; and that the reunion of the southern forces has been signalized by a somewhat disastrous defeat at the hands of the troops of Chang To Lin. Outwardly, the Chinese seem to be moving toward, as to the mastery of the Caucasus and the northern war lord, or at least to preserve the conventional appearance of doing so that is proper in such circumstances. But they may indulge a hope that events are approaching which will bring about a final settlement of the question of who is to rule.

It is interesting to note that the Brazilian chamber today gave first reading to the bill withdrawing Brazil from the war between Germany and the United States. A city business man has written to Mayor St. John, proposing that authority be limited to a speed of six miles per hour on city streets.

peas at home and to make binding agreements with other countries. That way lies peace in China, and the establishment of permanent and proper trade relations between the Chinese people and those of other lands.

An extra issue of the Alberta Gazette contains notices that the Village act and the Town Act passed at the recent session of the Legislature are by proclamation brought into force as from the first of the present month. One change of minor importance is the popular increase in the size of the town council from that date there has not been a "council" in any urban municipality in the province. The first magistrate of every city, town and village in Alberta is now and henceforth a "mayor".

Luck

By EDGAR A. GUSTAV

If you want luck I'll tell you how to get it. Get busy with the task you have to do. Don't let your mind rest, don't let your soul rest. But you must draw the goddess unto you. Learn this—there is no such thing as trying. You must find the chap who isn't trying.

If you are ever eager to be lucky:

"Then first you must be willing to be tried. Then you must be strong enough to be lucky. And make the goddess keep an eye on you. I'll drop this hint and hope that you will take it to heart and follow my advice to the letter."

Now, any job will do for a beginning.

The willing youth can start from any spot. The worker always has a chance to prove his worth. The man who is too busy, though, has not the time to prove his worth. So drop this beneath your bonnet, youthful reader. May new opportunities come to you.

Luck never comes in answer to your wishing.

Who would succeed must venture with defeat. If you want fish you've got to go out fishing. If you want a girl you've got to go out and meet. Fortune it seems is drawn by some attraction. Luck always seems to favor men of action.

Aeroplanes

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Some of us can remember back to the time when the Wright brothers made their first flight, that was heavier than air. It was not so long ago that man had not even learned to fly the first man flying across the channel.

Since then the Atlantic ocean has been crossed and the Pacific is to be crossed. The first transatlantic flight came from Europe to America, a dining car to come from Germany to the United States.

Europe's air mail lines are functioning in many places. Europe shows us a net work of airplane routes to and from every part of the globe.

Some idea of the rapidity of modern progress of airways and dirigibles but it is full of rumors if any air traffic is to be needed.

More and more the world is viewing the airplane with favor and with confidence that the future of the particularity of an airplane that was heavier than air. It was not so long ago that man had not even learned to fly the first man flying across the channel.

The effect of alcohol is at first to stimulate and then to depress. If too much strong liquor is taken at one time, the stimulation will develop to the stage of intoxication, then there is to be a period of depression, then again to all individuals and in the case of mince pie, the only excuse for its use is that it brought good. No one has ever claimed that it brought even temporary stimulation. The result is always a depressed, overacted, dopey feeling, but we are going to the same place with the same result, but from a different way and succeeds in passing an Anti-Mince Pie law. To quote from a recent speech he made:

"A slab of mince pie is very likely to give a child—even an old stager like me, or the Governor—quite a bad attack of indigestion, probably nightmare. The case of mince pie is a good example of how sleep abuts upon growth and development, and how the result of overeating and nervousness, and the first thing a person knows is that he has a bad case of indigestion, and a pie-eating habit formed that keeps him a person all through life."

"I believe the only reason for the popularity of mince pie is that it is a combination of the possession of a good name and rigid adherence to the traditions of Kansas and rigid penalties for making, serving or selling it."

DOROTHY DIX

The Successful Business Girl Who Imagines People
Pity Her Because She Is Unmarried—Getting Rid Of a Back-Door Neighbor—Shall She Marry Her
Sweet and Good Fiance Who Won't Work?

Dorothy Dix, 21, am 20 years old and still unmarried. I earn a fine salary, have a good home, and am well liked. I long to get married and see many of my married friends. I realize that I am much better off than the other girls. I think people regard unmarried girls as objects of pity, or are they just as much respected as married women?

OLD MAID.

Answer: The expression you see in your friends' eyes that you mistake for pity is probably envy. You are successful, and they would gladly swap your husband for yours.

But I am pleased and amazed to find that anybody in these enlightened days still thinks it is wrong for a woman to marry any reflection upon a woman to be unmarried. It is the woman who is to blame for her importance by attracting herself a husband.

In other times, when about the only respectable gainful occupation open to women was to be a maid, there was no question of marriage. If she failed to land a husband, because that was the only way for her to obtain a meal ticket or any freedom at all, she was pitied. But today every woman would marry if she could, and if she failed to do so it indicated that she lacked the qualities that make a man want to marry her.

Therefore, the old maid was the subject of ridicule and was cartooned and made fun of. Today she is old and bored all of that, and has a point of view just as old-fashioned as hoop skirts.

Nowadays a woman stands exactly on the same platform, so far as marriage is concerned, as a man does. It is a matter of individual inclination, and there is no stigma attached to it, and nobody dreams of criticizing her or laughing at her any more than they do at an old maid. In fact, the old maid is the most popular person here, and she is invited to dance for all festive occasions, for however date on these cultivated and agreeable men and women who can be interested in her.

The poor, dependent old maid who had to be the fringe on some family that didn't want her, was an object of pity and scorn. But nobody is sorry for the capable, independent, unmarried woman of today, who earns a good living, who likes to work, who is bright, cheerful, and happy, and is alert and jolly and enjoys life and adds to the pleasure of all with whom she comes in contact.

There is only one reason in the world for marrying, and that is love. You have found some man who fills your life so completely that existence without him is ainder, and dust, and misery. None of us can afford to be独身, and if you are poor, or very poor, or how hard you have to work, it will be worth while to marry. Marriage is the best thing in the world.

Lots of us are shedding tears of sympathy over women with drunken husbands, over women with unfaithful husbands, over women who have been beaten and tortured, over women whose husbands have waded over poor, shabby, overworked women with their houses full of little children whose husbands are too laid and shiftless to make them a living.

But none of us has a tear to shed over a woman who is "stringing along" with a man who is a scoundrel, a car and a good home and pretty clothes just because she isn't married.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—We have a neighbor who visits us to death. She is in our house by day and night, and partly responsible for the misery of the day. She pries into all of our affairs, must even know who our letters are from. I am so tired of her that I feel as if I could give her a good dose of poison. What can we do to rid ourselves of this DESPERATE.

Answer: All the pouts in the world, the "back-door neighbor" is the worst. But, inasmuch as she doesn't allow her to be dealt with as she deserves, all that you can do is to ignore her. If she will not leave you alone, then you will be glad if she will not come so often. If this takes more time than you possess, just move to another place. It is well to be considerate, but don't let her upon them in vain.

We believe that the only way to get rid of her will make a mortal enemy of her, which is better than being bored to death. If that will comfort you to know that you do much better alone, I can assure you that we all understand.

Probably there is no one so lucky as not to have one of these old women on her back—some idle, purposeless woman who is too lazy to work, too slow to move, and too stupid to be of any use. Before you are fully up of a morning, she interferes with all your plans and interrupts your work. She stays until you are through with her, and then you will be glad if she will not come again. If this takes more time than you possess, just move to another place. It is well to be considerate, but don't let her upon them in vain.

She should be given a licking, but a lasher for the back-door neighbor. It's the only punishment that would fit the crime.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am in love with a boy and have a great desire to marry him. He is very poor. So poor, in fact, he will hold a job for a few weeks, then quit. He has the sweetest disposition and is good in every way. Everybody likes him. Do you think he would make a good husband?

E. A.

Answer: I certainly don't, E. A. I think a lazy, shiftless man is about the most unattractive in the world. Whether laziness is a mental or a physical condition, I don't know. But whatever it is, it goes to the bone and is incurable.

I have known drunkards to reform, and gamblers who quit and never touched a card again and renegades who became as domestic as the house itself. I have seen a lot of men who were given a second chance and did not take it. That just seems to be common sense, that makes it impossible for them to exert themselves.

There are a lot of good men who are good-for-nothing. Goodness is only half the story, and there are other desirable qualities. There needn't result in a man from failing from doing harm if he never anything else.

And before I say, my dear girl, you'd soon on that sweet disposition of his if your husband just sat around down and let you starve, or sit around and do nothing. He would be a good husband if he worked and took things easy and was available and good-natured.

Every house has that sort of a kindly, good-for-nothing, worthless, easy-going idler who wears the air that he won't come and let around the house. He is a real hoodlum, a real railroad station, while his wife takes in sewing or washing to support him.

Don't let yourself in for a lifetime of misery with any man who won't work. The test of a man's love is his willingness to toil for his wife.

Anglo-Russian Rupture Takes on New Fury

Associated Press

LONDON, May 31.—The Anglo-Russian rupture took a new turn yesterday when the British Foreign Office issued an official ultimatum to Sir Austin Chamberlain requesting him to remain in Great Britain to meet the emergency.

Soviet citizens to remain in Great Britain until further notice, and the British government to remain in London.

The British government also issued a general order that no Soviet citizens or organizations in the United Kingdom be allowed to leave the country.
